Looking for some serious firepower in a slick and practical package? If so Pete Moore says check out Browning's Take-Down lever action rifle

The lever-action rifle is a curious beast and as a design pretty much 90% American in concept and execution. First appearing in the mid/late 1800s and made famous by Winchester and Marlin it has had a long and fruitful life. Feed-wise the standard build gets a fixed, under-barrel tube magazine loads through the side of the action. To my knowledge only four box examples have been produced of these only one exists today,

Fastest lever-action in the west - the Browning, BLR, Light Weight, Take-Down. If you're looking for a slick and powerful manually operated game rifle this is it...
